

Everyday, people of anywhere takes the same route over and over again and completely missing what else there is outside of their comfort zones. There are tons of areas that might be of interest for lots of people. Riddles Everyday is a locative game based off treasure hunt game that most people already know, where riddles, charades or anything in that matter indicates the next location in the hunt to finally arrive to its final goal. Our game has some similarities but is quite different at the same time. We present 1 riddle each day, 5 per week, and this riddle leads to a different location. Be in the first to solve the riddle and you will earn more points towards the weekly rankings. The top 5 players of the weeks are the ones designing the 5 next riddle for the following week. Players need to answer the riddles with a picture proof and/or a geo-location proof. When putting up a new riddle for next week, you can either post a written riddle or a photographic riddle. A written riddle can be anything in Concordia, including professors' offices. What is fun and special is that the riddles are community based so as a player you learn new locations and resources but also share new ones to others.
